Notice of External Monitoring SEC 0203

Please read the information below carefully.

Read our FAQ on External Monitoring for additional information about this requirement.

Any or all uses of Berkeley Lab's Information Technology (IT), associated connected systems and all files may be intercepted, monitored, recorded, copied, audited, inspected, retained, and disclosed to authorized University, Department of Energy and law enforcement personnel.

By completing this course, you acknowledge that you have no expectation of privacy in your use of DOE and Berkeley Lab IT. Some Berkeley Lab services are provided by third party providers or monitored by external parties. Where applicable, you acknowledge monitoring by Berkeley Lab, the third party provider, or external party. Authorized investigative agencies may access any DOE computer used during the period of your access to information on a DOE computer, and for a period of three years thereafter.

In addition, when you use Berkeley Lab IT, you agree to our policies which include prohibitions on accessing sexually explicit materials, violating copyrights, or interfering with the operation or security of systems. This is a summary of our policies - the full versions are available in the Berkeley Lab RPM. In particular, you may want to review the following:

- Privacy, Monitoring, and Access without Consent
- Acceptable Use of Information Technology
- Security for Information Technology

Your completion of this course constitutes consent to these terms.
